Democratic politicians concede that Mr. Robertson, next to Assemblyman Husted, would be the strongest candidate the Keputican could nominate, but that neither could be elected by Republican votes, even if the district was Republican, on account of the party in Westchester County. There is a division in the organization in Yonkers, headed by Mayor Millward on one side and T. A. Aitkins and M. D. Raymond on the other.

Ex-Assemblyman Bradford Rhodes leads the opposition to Mr. Robertson in the second Assembly District, and the Third District, "Bald Engle" Husted's own, and will go as Gen. Husted goes.

Ex-Collector Robertson is a man of expedients. It is said he will rely largely on combin attons with dissatisfied Democrats, whose support would counteract the "knifing" he would get at the hands of dismantied Republicans.

At the last election 2.561 votes were cast for an independent candidate, and 221 votes were scattering. These 2.800 and about 700 or 800 others who did not vote at all, constitute "the kickers," it is said, and Mr. Robertson's friends claim that he is the only stitute "the kickers," it is said, and Mr. Robertson's friends claim that he is the only man who can harmonize that element and carry its support. That support with other gains he figures would insure his election, according to their rosy view.

A story published this morning in a Republican organ to the effect that John Keenan, the Bismarck of the County Democracy, was trying to undermine Leader Pat Reenan and secure control in the Twelfth District, is pronounced absurd by Lawyer E. M. Friend, a member of the Tammany District organization in the District. "John Keenan," said he, "has not lived in the District for years. He is a resident of West Eighty-third street."

It is such that county again by a Republican sal-rity large enough to offset a possible large Democratic plurality in the Twenty-louding like an artistic chromo.

A peculiar incident occurred at the Academy during a rehearsal of Adele Sandrock and company the other morning. The play was one of those emotional delicacies, in which a few fainting its are dotted about. A sofa was necessary for the neroine to fall upon. It had not been used for some time, but had been preserved from moths by wholesale applications of red pepper. When Fri. Sandrock's turn came to swoon she threw herself confidingly upon the velvet lounge, and, not being absolutely sylph-like, her weight caused a cloud of red pepper to ascend. Everybody sneezed and felt uncomfortable and the rehearsal was broken up.

"The Missing Link" is the name of the play written by Aubrey Boucicault, in which he s, with E. J. Heuley, to star next season.
